To add your account do Microsoft® Office 365 or do Exchange ActiveSync ao Gmail: Open or App Config. Have an office365 work email with custom domain (email/contacts/calendar via ActiveSync). Oauth's activesync clients (e.g. macos) are not affected by the expiration of the password as they have a different type of authentication token.I don't know if Microsoft is returning junk error messages that Android can't provide something more useful to the end user or if Android just isn't scanning and going through the errors of the microsoft server...e.g. I don't know if this terrible user experience is more Microsoft's or Google's fault.In any case, I hope this helps someone else running into the same problem.Add this to the MSFT support knowledge base. I don't think it's in the gmail application how contacts and calendar applications also use integration. All these combinations cause the error "something went wrong". Insira or email e come credenciais do Microsoft® Office 365 ou do Exchange ActiveSync. Perhaps android's Activesync implementation has been implemented differently as it is affected while macos is not. Anyway I deleted the Google account with the same email and the duplicate error went away but now I'm back to "something went wrong". checked all the settings ... plus it had worked for years without problems (I don't get a new phone very often).OnePlus 5T, fully updated, but no system/android recent updates. You need to go login/logout to various endpoints of microsoft to eventually be prompted to set a new password. You will not be told that your password has expired. O Gmail is compativel com contas do Microsoft® Office 365 e do Exchange ActiveSync e vem preinstalado em all os Android. Also, as I said I haven't changed anything recently on office365 administration settings or user settings.Googling has not revealed any recent posts that would indicate this is a new/common known issue.I restarted in Recovery and canceled caches. I opened a support request with MSFT but are not optimistic, they can help unless this is a well-known problem that only somehow avoids search engines. So I performed an ActiveSync connectivity test using your MSFT tool here: <https://testconnectivity.microsoft.com/> Used "Basic / Password" authentication instead of OAuth because this is what Android appears apparently . Failed autodiscover Despite the DNS to be configured correctly. GPS. It seems to update from Play Store but I can't see it in Play Store as a normal app to check the update history. Maybe Google Play Services? Also this integration used to work with the same settings up to a week or so. It has been set to my Android for years without problems. Very strange that Office.com did not push me to update my password when I logged in (for the first time in months) previously today ... But trying to make an OAuth token for the test tool asked me To set a new password.baybe the support has changed something after opening the ticket ... because surely I didn't receive that problem when I logged in earlier today. I received the "duplicate account" error because in the past I also added this email as an account Google (no emails / contacts / synchronization calendar) because I need Google login to google, when people share Google files Drive with me, etc. Toque em Exchange. MacOS can also use OAuth rather than basic password authentication. After carrying out the test with which I should check again with the Microsoft B but OAuth tool this time to see if it is still failed. When I went to sign to add the credential OAuth I was to change my password. But maybe ActiveSync lives somewhere else... If I knew I could check and see if that package was recently updated through the Play Store.After not being able to reconnect it, I deleted the Exchange account from my phone and went to RE-Add. Anche il integration on macos is working fine.Since your microsoft test tool is choking on the autodiscover step ... and the manual installation (by skipping autodiscover) is also failing ... Android might require you to fix your credentials and not tell you why. Stupid google developers assume that everyone uses 100% google stack as they do (if you have a google account/login at joe@example.com then you certainly wouldn't have any other account... e.g. swap using that email!?!?). Depois that vocAA~ add his account to Gmail, maybe you will need to configure uma senha for meo das Policies of caixa mail for devices ma3ve caso seu administrator IT exija isso. do device. I haven't changed anything on the administrative side of Office365 for a long time. The Microsoft Connectivity Analyzer failed to get an Autodiscover XML response, however I just logged into the portal earlier today to check things in the admin center and there were no requests/errors on the expiration of the password. At the bottom, press the Adicionar conta key. I then cleared the app cache for both Google Play Services and Gmail. I don't know in which android app/package lives the exchange/activesync code. Last week or so had a persistent android notification about needing to update credentials or something (authentication or connection error or something else mis-categorized). Please go to update your password. "So much time wasted for stupid reasons. Tocca em Contas. Counts.
